FORMAT OF THE RYDER CUP
Four-Ball: Four players compete on a team against another team with both players hitting a tee shot and then playing the tee shot by dividing the shot into par with their partners. The team with the lowest score wins the hole. Should the two teams have the same score, the hole is halved.
Foursome: Four players compete on a team against another team with each player hitting a shot and playing the shot by dividing the shot into par with their partners. The team with the lowest score wins the hole. Should the two teams have the same score, the hole is halved.
Singles: “Singles” is a match in which one player from the U.S. Team competes against another player from the European Team, each playing his own ball. The player with the lowest score on each hole will win the hole. A player wins this head-to-head competition when he is up by more holes than there are remaining to play. On Sunday, all twelve team members from the U.S. Team will compete against the twelve team members from the European Team.

There are a total of 28 matches, played in three different forms of Match Play.

MESSAGE FROM THE 39th RYDER CUP CAPTAINS

Since its inception in 1927, the Ryder Cup has embodied golf's highest ideals of sportsmanship, honor and integrity. Throughout the years, players have represented their countries and the game of golf with pride and honor.

While partisanship is natural, it is important to remember that the Ryder Cup is intended to be a friendly competition between the best golfers on two continents. The sportsmanship of the spectators plays a vital role in the continuing spirit and success of the Ryder Cup.

In order to preserve this grand tradition, we hope that there will be no excessive partisanship displayed by the gallery. While all good shot making should be applauded, the prospective misfortunes of an opposing player should not be celebrated -- nor be applauded, the prospective misfortunes of an opposing player should not be celebrated -- nor should comments of any kind be made while a player is hitting his shot.

OFFICIAL RYDER CUP RADIO

Specially programmed radios will be available for purchase at the Ryder Cup Golf Shop. These radios will broadcast the audio portion of the televised feed on the Ryder Video Board. Additionally, live-play-by-play radio commentary will be called throughout the competition (Friday through Sunday) on a separate channel. The Ryder Cup radios can be purchased for $15 each at multiple locations throughout the course.
